American Studies

Professor: Mills (Director)

The concentration in American studies offers an interdisciplinary approach to the study of American culture. The concentration provides an excellent background for a wide variety of pursuits. Students will take six courses focusing on American institutions in fine arts, history, literature, political science, psychology, sociology, and religion. The concentration also offers a focus on Native American and African American Studies.

American Studies courses

AMST/HIST 110 History of the United States I
America from contact times to 1865, with emphasis on economic, social, intellectual, and political developments.

AMST/HIST 111 History of the United States II
America from 1865 to the present, with emphasis on economic, social, intellectual, and political developments.

AMST/ENGL 269 New World Narratives: American Literature 1500-1790
A study of the divergent and complementary tales emerging from those settled in or settling "America." Texts include American Indian and European creation myths, exploration narratives, Puritan poetry, captivity narratives, and late 18th-century fiction and non-fiction.
Prerequisite: Sophomore standing or an English Reading the World course.

AMST/ENGL 270 Reform and Renaissance: U.S. Literature 1790-1865
A study of literature emerging during a period of significant social upheavals; the continuing shift from a colonial to an
"American" identity, the unsettling of indigenous populations, the movement of European populations westward, and the Slavery and Woman questions. Through an exploration of diverse texts, students will examine a literature shaped by an impulse to transform or reform pre-existing perspectives and genres.

Prerequisite: Sophomore standing or an English Reading the World course.

AMST/ENGL 275 American Realisms: U.S. Literature 1865-1914

This course examines a variety of approaches to knowing a literary period. We will explore theoretical, socio-historical, formal, and thematic paradigms that can organize our understanding of the wide variety of written and cinematic texts produced in the period between the end of the Civil War and the beginning of World War I. Through a study of the frequently conflicting stories about gender, race, sexuality, art, and Americanness that come to voice during this period, students will challenge and complicate their definitions of literary realism.

Prerequisite: Sophomore standing or an English Reading the World course.

AMST/ENGL 276 Modernism and Postmodernism: U.S. Literature 1914-Present

A study of the rise of a modern aesthetic in the wake of World War I and the postmodern response in the second half of the 20th century with an eye toward the diversity of voices and formal choices that mark this period.

Prerequisite: Sophomore standing or an English Reading the World course.

AMST 295 Race and Islam in America

This course traces the experiences of Muslims in North America from the sixteenth century to the present, with special focus on Islam in America after 9/11. It places particular emphasis on how Muslims have shaped American life and culture, how Muslim communities have been racialized in U.S. discourse, and how Muslims have sought to re-define their racial and religious identities in a U.S. context, particularly after the rise of the War on Terror.

AMST 593 Senior Individualized Project

Each program or department sets its own requirements for Senior Individualized Projects done in that program, including the range of acceptable projects, the required background of students doing projects, the format of the SIP, and the expected scope and depth of projects. See the Kalamazoo Curriculum -&gt; Curriculum Details and Policies section of the Academic Catalog for more details.

Prerequisite: Permission of department and SIP supervisor required.

The Academic Catalog contains the most accurate information available at the time of publication. Statements contained therein are not contractual obligations, and verbal or other representations that are inconsistent with or not contained within the catalogues' offerings or policies are not binding.
