Language Courses

LANG 121 International Civil Rights Movements
This course is for non-native speakers of English. This unique classroom environment is created especially for multilingual students. We discuss and debate issues from civil rights movements in the US, South Africa, and India. We practice and use the techniques of leaders such as Martin Luther King, Jr, Nelson Mandela, and Gandhi. This class will study and develop communications skills and strategies that students need to speak and be understood in their academic and professional communities.

LANG 131 Comedy &amp; Resistance: A Content-Based Academic Writing Course ESOL
For international students and non-native speakers of English, this course is designed to improve academic writing and reading skills. Content will focus on comedy and the role of comedy to resist oppression, injustice and discrimination. Student experiences outside of the mainstream and outside of the US will be valued and encouraged. Materials will include comics, political cartoons, articles, short stories, anecdotes and stand-up routines. The work of influential satirists such as Aldous Huxley, Richard Pryor, Sarah Silverman and Stephen Colbert will be used to discuss comedy's power to disrupt and threaten powerful cultural assumptions. Students will engage in thoughtful discussion and argumentation in the classroom and create deliberate academic writing that is thoroughly edited and polished. Skills acquired in this course will be transferable to a variety of writing opportunities and academic settings.

LANG 210 Foreign Language Teaching Methods and Practicum I
This course will broaden your understanding of second language learning and currently espoused foreign language teaching methodologies while helping you to develop your own skills as a foreign language instructor. The main topics covered will be teaching speaking, listening, and reading skills, lesson planning, and teaching language in context. *This course is only open to foreign language teaching assistants.

LANG 210I Is: Foreign Language Teaching Methods

LANG 211 Foreign Language Teaching Methods and Practicum II
This course will broaden your understanding of second language learning and currently espoused foreign language teaching methodologies while helping you to develop your own skills as a foreign language instructor. The main topics covered will be motivating students, teaching for cultural understanding, teaching vocabulary, and error correction. *This course is only open to foreign language teaching assistants.

Prerequisite: Visiting International Students or permission

LANG 212 Foreign Language Teaching Methods and Practicum III
Prerequisite: Visiting International Students or permission

LANG 593 Senior Individualized Project

The Academic Catalog contains the most accurate information available at the time of publication. Statements contained therein are not contractual obligations, and verbal or other representations that are inconsistent with or not contained within the catalogues' offerings or policies are not binding. Kalamazoo College reserves the right to change, without specific notice, offerings, policies, procedures, qualifications, fees, and other conditions.

This content was last updated on October 18 2017.