Critical Ethnic Studies

Professors: Baptiste, Gómez (director), Katanski, Salinas, and Sinha

Critical Ethnic Studies interrogates the production of knowledge. CES Majors are required to theorize from multiple, and simultaneous, narratives of silenced peoples and epistemologies. Critical Ethnic Studies untangles and analyzes colonial and racial projects that attempt to govern the relationship between people and land.

Critical Ethnic Studies is an interdisciplinary field and process of engagement. The field seeks to change the logic governing the academy, and does not accept an uncomplicated grafting of content onto a universal idea. This change is realized through the relentless pursuit of multiple means of engagement. These processes invert, rethink, and displace universalities. Central to the field is a refusal to consume the other. Critical Ethnic Studies requires that scholars go beyond themselves, and devise conversations that move beyond voyeurism and consumption.

*Courses taught as part of the RTW series in the English Department must be approved of by CES Director. Only those RTW courses taught by Drs. Salinas and Sinha will be approved.

Courses that fit into the major will be designated CES courses under course type. The elective lists will continue to develop. For a list of current electives please consult the Critical Ethnic Studies website.

Courses taken at other U.S. colleges and universities, or on Study Abroad, may count for an elective course. We usually only accept one transfer credit toward the major. Please speak with the Director of the program for final approval and clarification.

Critical Ethnic Studies courses

CES 200 Argument With the Given

This course is a survey course; consequently a wide breadth of topics will be covered. The primary work will consist of developing a sophisticated understanding of central themes, and key concepts, in the field of Critical Ethnic Studies. Students will pursue that understanding via an interdisciplinary process. The secondary goal will be to acquire and build the skills necessary to pursue further learning in Critical Ethnic Studies; these include identifying your own research agenda (obsessions and desires), stocking your analytical tool kit (bibliographic skills, critical thinking, and the identification of knowledge demands), and lighting your intellectual fire (interest in the field).

CES 240 Language: the Colonial & Imperial Difference

This course is an interdisciplinary survey course designed to introduce students to the study of language and power. Our primary objective will be to assert linguistic rights and interrogate the politics of language in light of colonization, imperialism and the transit of empire. We will consider ideas and practices of literacy, language revitalization, translation and identity. These explorations will serve as a means to counter the monologism, monoculture, and monolingualism often invoked in nationalist projects.

CES 260 Insurgency, Solidarity and Coloniality Of Power

This course is an interdisciplinary survey course designed to engage students in the study of power. The primary focus will be on instances of continuity and insurgency, between and among world indigenous, national and transnational subjects. Embedded in this practice will be the assertion of epistemic rights, and simultaneous world views, and the varied and landed responses made to world systems of racialization and colonization. We will engage history and narrative through the power of storytelling and the critical fictions of conquest and enslavement. Most important, we will ask: what alternatives to modernity/coloniality can we conceive of through practices of insurgency and solidarity? How can we restore relations that have been severed, or disfigured, by these same world systems, as well as our wide-ranging responses to them?

CES 490 CES Senior Colloquium

The Critical Ethnic Studies Senior Colloquium, 1-unit course collaboratively shaped by the CES faculty and senior majors. The colloquium will focus on the planning and executing of an intellectual social-political project that contributes to the CES program, to the larger community, and to the field of Critical Ethnic Studies. The Critical Ethnic Studies Senior cohort will decide the form and content project, in collaboration and consultation with CES faculty, who will provide leadership and organizational support. Infused in the project and the work of the course are professional development, collaborative scholarly work, and learning community development.

Prerequisite: Must be a CES Major

CES 490S CES Senior Colloquium

This course will be supervised by the CES core faculty, and reflects a rethinking of the capstone. Critical Ethnic Studies Majors would be required to take at least the fall (.2 unit) section of the 490 series, and may take up to 1 full unit (all three sections .2, .4. and .4). Students unable to take the fall section would need to petition the major to join the colloquium in progress. Such permission would only be given in extenuating circumstances. Each critical ethnic studies cohort would meet in the fall term to decide the form and content of the colloquium; at this time they would also define, formalize and record assessment guidelines and procedures. The entirety of this work is collaborative; the designated Critical Ethnic Studies Faculty will provide leadership, organizational support and serve as liaison to the office of the registrar. The purpose of the colloquium is to determine an intellectual social-political project that can be carried out over the year that contributes to the field. Students would conduct this project over the remaining academic year. Infused in this course are professional development, collaborative scholarly work, learning community development, and cohesion for the cohort. This practicum could include working with the Center for Career and Professional Development, the Mary Jane Underwood Stryker Center for Civic Engagement, and the Arcus Center for Social Justice Leadership. Note: Configuring the course this way allows students maximum flexibility in their senior year. Students who fail to take the full 1 unit of the CES Senior Colloquium would be required to make up the additional partial unit to fulfill the full 8 units required of the major.

Prerequisite: CES-490F Must be a Senior CES major

CES 593 Senior Individualized Project
